

Kline Galland Launches Senior Care Resource Line Helping Families Navigate Care

Innovative phone line provides families and seniors direct access to a live care specialist 7 days a week

SEATTLE – May 1, 2017 – Seattle-based senior care organization Kline Galland has launched its new dedicated senior care resource phone line, (206) 723-INFO (4636). This unique and free Senior Care Resource Line connects people with a live advocate offering expert consultation and support for the full range of senior care services throughout King County.

“The Kline Galland Senior Care Resource Line is the new entry point to our continuum of care as well as regional resources,” said Kline Galland CEO Jeff Cohen. “I see families in my office every day making difficult senior care decisions for their loved ones. The unknowns and choice of options is great and getting greater by the day. This line give families a simple single-source resource to make informed decisions about health and wellness for the senior in their family.”

This no-cost, no obligation service is a direct line to a senior care specialist seven days a week to have concerns and questions resolved over the phone. Service offerings include, but are not limited to, hospice, palliative care, long-term care, adult day care, short-term care and rehab, home care, home health, independent living, supported living and memory care.

“People are living longer and with more vitality and independence than ever before – that’s a good thing,” said Cohen. “As people age there are so many dynamic options for senior living and care in the region. It can be daunting getting the right information, but the Senior Care Resource Line makes starting these conversations easy.”

In the recent years, the trend to allow seniors to age in place has continued to grow and Kline Galland has witnessed this first hand. The Senior Care Resource Line creates a one stop resource center for the community and helps connect seniors with the right type of care at the right time.
