COMMUNITY LIFE

Kline Galland was my focus. Yet I am but one of many. There have been – and always will be – so many people who have given so much. People I have served who have brought their skills to Kline Galland – Carol Jaffe, Lily Cohen, Lilly Ives, Marsha Albert – people who provided such real and meaningful guidance. In a sense, we all could have brought some amount of time, energy, and inspiration into something else. But time, in terms of knowing you all about something, was always going to be a great deal. You gave so much to Kline Galland because you wanted to.

I am so pleased that my son Alex, without being asked, has continued the family tradition. Like my father before me, I know my family would agree, what I have done at Kline Galland is by far the most significant thing I've ever done – beyond anything that I have accomplished in business. I am so pleased that my son, Alex, without being asked, has continued the family tradition of Kline Galland. It was important, my contributions over those many years will survive by decades. In terms of what I've provided for the general good of the earth, I couldn't be better about it.

Mission: The Kline Galland Center follows – and always will be – so many people who have given so much. People I have served who have brought their skills. The services Kline Galland provides are so fundamental to quality of life at important times in life. An environment you can rely on, one you can trust, free from your routine care. Thankful to Lord it should be the everyday entire care follows – the welcome mat is out for everyone.

I AM BUT ONE OF MANY

Fulfilling a Commandment

Over the years, I have consciously done as much mentoring as I can. Kline Galland goes beyond my family. My role became involved in a myriad of institutions – Kline Galland and its important commandment and heritage – In memory of my father. You have my parents in mind of different ways and times is for – now more important than when they are in mind and are unable to do so themselves. The services Kline Galland provides are of such extraordinary quality of life at important times in life. An environment you can rely on, one you can trust, free from your routine care. Thankful to Lord it should be the everyday entire care follows – the welcome mat is out for everyone.

Over a century ago, with the conviction and compassion like no other, Caroline Kline Galland set out to change the world of senior care. As I look back, I am humbled in no way at all of our community has accomplished with the help of Kline Galland.

From a little house established with Caroline’s “seed money” of more than $1.4 million (over 36 million in today’s dollars) – to the growth and evolution during the 1920s and into the 21st century – one community has created a single Senior Care Resource Like no other.

As babies, grandparents, and wants and needs have changed with time, the community’s vision and support has helped us to navigate health care.

Implementing an Innovative Senior Care Resource Line to answer questions 7 days a week

In this issue of Chai Lites, we are honored to highlight (no pun intended) generations of the Leavitt family. They are symbols of the strength and support throughout our Jewish community that has made our Kline Galland your Kline Galland. Caroline would not if any other way.

The Kline Galland Center (KGC) is a non-profit community-based Home Health and Home Care agency that serves the Greater Bay Area. KGC is committed to improving the lives of older adults by providing high-quality, affordable, and compassionate care. The KGC team is dedicated to helping individuals and families navigate the challenges of aging and ensuring that everyone has access to the resources they need to live independently and with dignity.

Caroline Kline Galland

Caroline Kline Galland (1855-1914) was a dedication and innovation in the field of senior care. She was an early advocate for the concept of a “continuum of care,” where care was provided in a variety of settings, including at home. Kline Galland’s vision was driven by a desire to create a more holistic approach to care that focused on the individual’s needs and preferences. Her innovative thinking and commitment to improving the lives of older adults set the stage for the modern senior care industry.

At the age of 16, Jeanette Cohen saw her father, Max, fall ill and enter Kline Galland in 1939. She remembers him lying in bed when she was visiting him. When he passed away, she felt he was as if he had been taken away from her. She believes it was the most significant event of her childhood, as she had grown up with her parents. She had been taught to be respectful and to believe in God's work. From that experience, she learned to care deeply for others.

One of the reasons Kline Galland is so special is its community. It is a place where people can come together to support each other. It is a place where people can feel safe and secure. It is a place where people can share their stories and learn from each other. It is a place where people can feel welcome and included. It is a place where people can find comfort and solace. It is a place where people can feel loved and cared for.

Kline Galland is the center of senior care in our community. It is a place where people can come to for help and support. It is a place where people can come to for love and care. It is a place where people can come to for comfort and peace. It is a place where people can come to for hope and remembrance. It is a place where people can come to for everything.
